PRESIDENTIAL RACE
Trump, fellow Republicans paint dire portrait of America under Joe Biden

'Biden will merely be a puppet of radical Left-wing activists'

REUTERS
Charlotte, NC, August 25

PRESIDENT DONALD TRUMP and his fellow Republicans opened their national convention on Monday by painting a dire portrait of America if Democrat Joe Biden wins the White House in November, arguing he will usher in an era of radical socialism.

that Democrats were trying to steal the election.

Republicans had vowed to offer an inspiring, positive message in contrast to what they characterised as a dark and gloomy Democratic convention last week. But the first night's prime-time program featured speakers who peppered their remarks with ominous predictions if Democrats win power.

"They'll disarm you, empty the prisons, lock you in your home and invite MS-13 to live next door," US Representative Matt Gaetz, one of Trump's staunchest backers in Congress, said, referring to an international criminal gang.

The four-day convention got under way at a critical juncture for Trump, who trails Biden in national opinion polls during a pandemic that has killed more than 176,000 Americans, erasing millions of jobs and eroded the president's standing with voters.

Trump has focused on a "law and order" message in response to widespread protests following the police killing of George Floyd, a Black man in Minneapolis, and he has pushed schools and businesses to reopen despite the pandemic. Both messages represent the campaign's effort to win back suburban voters, especially women, who have abandoned the Republican Party in droves during the Trump era. Donald Trump Jr., the president's oldest son, portrayed the ongoing civil unrest as violent assaults on small businesses by anarchists and said Democrats would fail to keep neighbourhoods safe.

The convention's opening night also laid out what promises to be a central theme of the week: that Biden, a former vice president, and his running mate, US Senator Kamala Harris, will merely be puppets of radical left-wing activists.

Multiple speakers accused Biden of wanting to defund the police and ban fracking, though he has rejected both positions.

Another frenetic day for Trump threatened to overshadow his attempt to recalibrate the campaign, however. In Washington, congressional Democrats examined US Postmaster General Louis DeJoy, a Trump donor, over whether he was deliberately sabotaging mail service to harm voting by mail.

Amid US growth uncertainty, Fed seeks more firepower

REUTERS
August 25

A YEAR AGO, Federal Reserve Chair Jerome Powell warned fellow central bankers of the significant risks posed by trade policy uncertainty, and the lack of precedents for monetary policy in the face of those unknowns.

As Powell this week prepares to address the Fed's annual central bankers' conference - usually held in Jackson Hole, Wyoming, but being conducted virtually this year because of the ongoing Covid-19 pandemic - uncertainty and the threat it poses to economic growth looms larger than ever.

Everything is up in the air now, including how fast the coronavirus will spread, how many more people will die from Covid-19, the illness caused by the virus, and whether US lawmakers will deliver a new economic rescue package, and how big it will be if they do.

Added to that are political storm clouds gathering ahead of the November 3 presidential election, with President Donald Trump already stoking doubts over the fairness of the process and its outcome.

Against that background, Powell is expected to open the Kansas City Fed's annual economic policy conference on Thursday with an update on the US central bank's plans to refit its monetary policy approach to a world where persistently low inflation and low interest rates numb the effects of the Fed's recession-fighting stimulus measures.

Rising uncertainty about the economic outlook, which economists say stunts household spending, business investment and factory output, may add to pressure on the Fed to bolster its policy arsenal.

"When you have high degrees of uncertainty, it tends to mean policy is less effective," says Nicholas Bloom, an economics professor at Stanford University.

"For a given bang you need many more bucks."

A gauge of economic uncertainty that Bloom developed with colleagues has skyrocketed this year.

And new research published last week by the Fed suggests that "uncertainty shocks" compound over time, so that several in a row deliver a much bigger blow to the economic outlook than each one might have in isolation.

Losses from China overseas takeover binge continue piling up rapidly

BLOOMBERG
August 25

CHINESE BUYERS HAVE not only stopped snapping up iconic overseas assets, the coronavirus pandemic is ravaging the targets of deals that defined a headier era.

Whereas some prolific acquirers such as HNA Group Co and Anbang Insurance Group Co began falling into disarray before the recent crisis, the impact on investments in sectors hit hardest by the outbreak means healthier owners are now feeling the pain.

Conglomerate Fosun International Ltd could soon see its 2015 investment in Cirque du Soleil Entertainment Group wiped out, while PizzaExpress,

The great uncertainties in the relationship between China and the US have inevitably made Chinese investors more cautious with their cross-border deals owned by private equity firm Hony Capital, said this month it's likely to hand control of the British chain to creditors.

Baggage handler Swissport International AG is also negotiating with investors over a rescue that could see HNA exit the cash-strapped firm it bought in 2015, Bloomberg News has reported. HNA is also among Virgin Australia Holdings Ltd shareholders set to lose everything after the airline collapsed in April.

"Some of the Chinese overseas investments that have recently imploded are legacy acquisitions from the debt-fueled deal spree in the years before 2018," Lars Aagaard, head of mergers and acquisitions and financial sponsors for Asia Pacific at Barclays Plc based in Hong Kong, said in a phone interview.

Even Chinese companies' pre-Covid attempts to invest themselves from extricaments are being tripped up by the pandemic.

Dajia Insurance Group, the heir to troubled insurer Anbang, found itself suddenly without a buyer for a $5.8 billion portfolio of US luxury hotels when the virus struck. South Korea's Mirae Asset Global Investments Co did not consummate a deal agreed last fall by the April 17 deadline, prompting Dajia to sue.

To be sure, businesses in sectors such as transportation, tourism and hospitality are facing extreme challenges regardless of whether the owner is Chinese or someone else, Aagaard said.

At $15.1 billion, the volume of Chinese outbound M&A so far this year represents a 25% drop from a year earlier and a far cry from the peak in 2016, when China National Chemical Corp agreed to buy Swiss agrichemical maker Syngenta AG for $43 billion, according to Bloomberg data.

Citigroup cites $900 million human error. Lenders are puzzled.

BLOOMBERG
August 25

CITIGROUP IS CHALKING up its wayward $900 million payment to lenders of the embattled cosmetics giant Revlon Inc to one thing: human error.

The bank - which said on Monday it has been in the process of upgrading its loan operations platform after a review it undertook last year - said it mistakenly transmitted the payments after an employee didn't manually select the correct system options in its loan operation software.

But firms being sued to recoup the money said they haven't been able to get the bank to explain its mistake.

The duelling court filings late Monday came after Citigroup has recovered hundreds of millions of dollars, but some of the lenders are balking at its demand to return the payments, saying that Revlon was in default on their loans and owed them the money.

A group of lenders said in a letter to a Manhattan judge

"Unfortunately, the manual checks of that selection also failed to detect the mistake," Citigroup said in its court filing. "Citibank has determined that the mistaken payments resulted from human error."

Citigroup had been acting as an agent for Revlon's loans, collecting funds from the company and distributing them to creditors.

It said it had intended to make interest payments on Revlon's behalf but accidentally transferred a sum more than 100 times as big from its own accounts.

The lenders said in their letter that Citigroup has yet to explain to them what happened.

On multiple occasions, Citibank has advised the undersigned counsel that it believed it would be able to demonstrate, through a prompt factual presentation, that the disputed payments were in fact innocuous mistakes," according to the filing.

that the bank has declined their offer to conditionally return the money - "in exchange for a standard indemnity Citibank would pay back the funds were it later determined that Citibank was not entitled" to them.

Administrative agents are generally tasked with collecting and distributing interest payments and providing other housekeeping services on a loan. In its filing Monday, Citigroup said the 2016 loan to Revlon allowed certain lenders to have all or a portion of their share of the loan be repurchased by Revlon.

When a loan is repurchased like this, Citigroup said employees have to manually adjust the share of the loan held by the remaining lenders. In the case of the 2016 loan to Revlon, a Citigroup employee did not manually select the correct system options - allowing the loan to be paid back in full with interest.
